One of the few things I do regularly is Salsa dancing. Once a week there is a class for two hours and then open dancing after. I volunteered to take photos for Keith who runs the program and they have finally made their way to the Salsa Jamaica website. You'll need to open the gallery page to view my photos.

Of course as a volunteer, I receive no compensation for these photos other than walking through the door free but that's fine with me! I wasn't too happy with all of these photos on their own but I like the way he put them together. I have quite a few more so they should be up one of these days.
